THE FLIGHT OF THE HINDENBURG

NEW YORK -

The zeppelin LZ 129 Hindenburg and her sister ship are the two largest airships to grace the sky. About 70 feet shorter than the Titanic, the Hindenburg is nearly as luxurious, and is the pride of the German airfleet. Now she is visiting our shores to promote international relations between Germany and our fine country.

Tonight the Hindenburg will host a charity gala to raise money for all those suffering during the depression. This gala has a number of things going for it, including the attendance of some very powerful men, which includes the two primary candidates for the Presidential election, the preview for what will surely be a world-famous Egyptian Exhibition, organised by the well-known professor. Dr. Henry Jones, Sr., and last, but certainly not least, it is the final pre-race event for the great Air Race that crosses our skies tomorrow.

As if the Hindenburg hasn't spent enough time in foreign waters recently (she toured through Europe and stopped off in London before crossing the Atlantic Ocean), on this evening's voyage, she will be leaving American waters and travelling over international ones. For some of the people on attending the gala, it will be the first time they have been off American soil, as the Hindenburg is also acting as a travelling German Embassy to America.

Edith Keeler, a bright young woman and one of the organisers spoke to us briefly amid her last minute preparations. She spoke of her hope that this would help relieve the suffering of many and her desire to promote peace in the world, suggesting that with proper aid and contributions, the great hope of last decade, that the Great War would be the War to end all Wars, would come true. When asked about presidential candidate Cane Kameron's contribution, she smiled and said "It really wouldn't have been possible without his help, or the Germans agreeing to host it".

We understand that the guest list for tonight's gala includes the pilots entered into tomorrow's air race, various celebrities, both presidential candidates and Noble Prize winning German scientist, Albert Einstein (now a guest lecturer at Princeton University), and of course, who could forget the adorable little orphan, Annie, the very face of the campaign.

NEW YORK - At this evening's charity gala aboard the Hindenburg both Presidential Candidates will be present as the competition heats up. This gala has been spearheaded by political newcomer Cane Kameron, who we questioned earlier today. He informed the Daily Star that tonight wasn't about politics; it was something more important: it was about ensuring the welfare of all Americans and working towards a time when there are no hungry children in the street or out-of-work fathers desperately trying to feed their families. He went on to add that his only concern was that this was not enough. Very humanitarian and worthy goals, but the cynic in me just has to wonder if he means every word.

We were also lucky enough to speak with Mr Kameron's main competitor for the presidency, political veteran Franklin D. Roosevelt, who said he will be putting aside differences for tonight in favour of supporting a good cause. When asked if he thought tonight was going to be about politics, he said that this close to the election, almost everything becomes about politics, but that doesn't mean we can't pull together to help all Americans.

Moving sentiments from both candidates before what is likely to a historic fight. All the polls thus far indicate that support is split very evenly between the candidates so what they do and say over the next few weeks will likely determine the outcome.

REWARD OFFERED BY KAMERON TO ORPHAN ANNIE'S PARENTS

NEW YORK - Cane Kameron recently made the amazing announcement that he would be offering enough money to whoever could prove they were this darling little girl's parents to ensure they will never want for anything again! He repeated that he only wanted to see Annie happily reunited with her family and hoped that they would come forward. The adorable Annie, grinning from ear to ear, could only say: "Mr. Kameron's the best! He's helping me find my folks!"

I SPENT THE NIGHT WITH ULTRAMAN

NEW YORK-

Exclusive first interview with the Steel Sentinel himself.

Last night for the first time ever the mysterious stranger from beyond the stars consented to a one on one exclusive interview. Friendly and confident, we talked almost casually about who he is and why he is here. He spoke of his passion to help people, to protect and use his amazing gifts to make the world a better and safer place.

I asked him where he is from, he explained that he came from a distant planet, Xenon, which was destroyed many years ago. He even told me that he has never met another of his own kind. This is something I can't even imagine but it makes him suddenly more human. Flying above us he seems almost unreachable, yet I find up close that is not the case.

This champion of the skies' abilities and history however do set him apart, I for one am just grateful that he has chosen to protect the people of the world and uphold the ideals of truth and justice. We are all very lucky to have Ultraman here among us and I have no doubt that centuries from now he sill still be remembered as one of the greatest beings to ever walk the Earth.

QUOTE OF THE DAY - When our very own William Randolph Hearst travelled to Germany to interview Adolf Hitler recently, Hitler asked why he was so misunderstood by the American press. Hearst snapped back "Because Americans believe in democracy and are averse to dictatorship."

A CLASH OF WINGED TITANS

NEW YORK - Tomorrow morning we will be witness to one of the greatest air races of our time. Pilots from Germany and England will compete against the best of our best in this highly publicised event. Sky Captain and Amelia Earhart will be meeting their opposition face to face tonight onboard the Hindenburg, but we have every confidence that our heroes will come through. The list of competitors is as follows:

Captain Joe Sullivan, our very own 'Sky Captain'
 Miss Amelia Earhart, 'Lady Lindy'
 'The Red Baron', the German mystery entrant
 Miss 'Valkyrie', the German woman's entrant
 Major James Bigglesworth (with the Hon. Capt. Algernon Lacey)
 Mr Howard Hughes, a privately funded entrant

At a pre-race function, we were able to meet with a few of the candidates. British Great War ace Major Bigglesworth and his equally accomplished co-pilot Captain "Algy" Lacey appeared relaxed, chatting casually with other pilots and media alike. Their delightful English accents stand out among the more relaxed Americans and guttural Germans and charm the ladies. They avoided discussing their entry plane, citing security reasons.

Dashing Joe Sullivan, our very own Sky Captain did mention his new plane, with special mention for his engineer, Dex, who designed it under trying circumstances. Captain Sullivan said that he was the main impediment to the testing process, and had even been banned from the workshop until a working prototype had been created! He seemed more amused about this than angry, and we are fortunate that Captain Sullivan is a good sport about such things.

The two woman entrants are a great contrast to each other. Amelia Earhart, is ever elegant and very fashionable, whereas Valkyrie (surely that cannot be her real name!) has such fervour and presence that she is almost terrifying.

Unusually taciturn, Amelia Earhart declined to comment on her newly released flight times, merely smiling and stating that we would just have to wait and see how she would do in the race, but that she had every confidence that the trend would continue.

Valkyrie, by contrast, spoke of doing this for the glory of the Vatarland and to honour Herr Hitler, the current Chancellor of Germany. She also told us about the fantastic programs Germany is now running for young people and how it is so good to see that America has decided to help their young people and those affected by the Depression. She is honoured to be part of this air race and support the charity drive.

ANOTHER MURDER DOWNTOWN

Police reports say that two days ago there was yet another mysterious death of a gang member. While one speculates that they might be glad about the disappearance of gang members making less trouble on the streets, our police force are sworn to protect and serve, as the officer in charge of the investigation stated, that includes murdered gang members. We are fortunate to have such dedicated men watching over us.

Although they are keeping the details quiet, speculation is rife that there is a serial killer about targeting gang members and other low lives that the police can't catch. Police declined to comment on how the men were killed, saying that even gang members deserve dignity in death. We asked around to get public opinion. Some people are outraged that a killer is loose and they are losing faith in the police; others are happy to see 'the scum of the Earth', as one lady put it, be removed permanently.

We have been advised to caution readers when venturing outside at night.

THE DAILY GOSSSIP

Now, as you all know we have various stars coming to town and I bet you want to know exactly what they have all been up to. Well, Greta Garbo, I have on very good authority is staying at one of the most expensive hotels and driving the staff nuts with her demands. She's still gorgeous, but if you ask me she really does need to watch her weight.

Clark Gable, that gorgeous man, has been seen going in and out of various studios including RKO; hopefully this means we will be seeing more of him on the big screen soon, ladies. He also seems to have left his wife at home; perhaps there's truth in the rumour that she's pregnant.

Then there's Errol Flynn and Bette Davis, who seem to be too obviously not looking at each other and not speaking. I think I see a secret affair going on back stage, but I will leave it up to you, dear readers.

A well-known writer was recently offered the best deal any director has ever received from RKO, but with the abrupt cancellation of his latest play, after an infamous and frightening broadcast, it may not be going ahead.
